ABOUT IGPP, FUDAN UNIVERSITY

复旦大学全球公共政策研究院

The Fudan Institute for Global Public Policy (IGPP) highlights Fudan University's new initiative to innovate research and education in social sciences and particularly in public policy. In partnership with the LSE-Fudan Research Centre for Global Public Policy, the institute aims to advance research on global public policy, to produce world-class research outputs, and to generate global academic and social impacts, in response to unprecedented global policy and governance challenges that call for designed and coordinated human actions.

ABOUT MGPP

项目介绍

The Master in Global Public Policy (MGPP) is a two-year, full-time, English-taught program that trains students on the theoretical and applied dimensions of global policy analysis, implementation and evaluation. Students who fulfill the graduation and degree requirements will be awarded the Master of Management Science in Public Policy from Fudan University.

The MGPP program equips students with global vision, in-depth knowledge and professional skills in addressing real-world public policy challenges. The program prepares students to become essential researchers, policy analysts and leaders in global public/private sectors and international organizations.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

项目特色

>>> Multinational team

MGPP faculty consists of highly accomplished and experienced scholars from top international universities and senior officials from international organizations.

>>> Interdisciplinary curriculum

The course design of MGPP integrates knowledge of different related disciplines (management, economics, political science and/or law) and advanced quantitative methods.

>>> Small group teaching

The high faculty-to-student ratio of MGPP creates a positive environment for students to have a customized learning experience and one-on-one instruction.

>>> Research support

MGPP provides the student with ample opportunities to join the academic team led by world-class scholars in public policy and publish high-quality research papers.
